The Consumer Electronics Industry And The Future Of American Manufacturing: How The U.S. Lost The Lead And Why We Must Get Back In The Game

Susan Walsh Sanderson Economic Policy Institute

We must first ensure that our economy is given all the necessary tools for America to lead the world in the technologies of the future. In these industries where markets may fail on their own, government can be. Twenty years ago, the United States was losing domestic manufacturing firms and was

Technological Perspectives on Behavioral Change - Google Books Result
Outsourcing: Where's Uncle Sam? - BusinessWeek 8 Jun 2011. The consumer electronics industry and the future of American manufacturing how the U.S. lost the lead and why we must get back in the game The consumer electronics industry and the future of American. 24 Aug 2011. Whichever country figures out how to lead in the production of In the last decade, the United States lost some five million manufacturing jobs. If you go back to the 1960s, he says, the American consumer-electronics. we must aspire to a different business model than the one we have come to admire. The consumer electronics industry and the future of American. The U.S. government should safeguard the interests of its citizens and do more to but it hurts the workers who lose jobs and those who lose the prospect of jobs If we allow American companies to outsource to countries that don't have laws as the outsider and get back into the game as an also-ran and not the leader.